Fast Splash of Colour

At the start of 1985, Toleman found itself without a tyre deal and was unable to compete in the first three races of the season. It was only a substantial financial injection from the fashion brand Benetton that persuaded Pirelli to supply tyres from the Monaco GP onwards. This not only saved the season for Teo Fabi but also enabled Toleman to field a second car for Piercarlo Ghinzani from the Austrian Grand Prix.

The TG185, designed by Rory Byrne and powered by a Hart 4-cylinder turbo engine, was, in combination with the Pirelli tyres, the big surprise of the year anyway, even if it took a bit of luck for Teo Fabi to secure pole position on the new Nürburgring Grand Prix circuit.

Just as unusual as the Italian fashion brand's advertising campaigns were in the 1980s, so too was the Toleman's livery that year: the national flags of the world – arranged differently at every Grand Prix – were spread across the car. A true splash of colour on the grid. Teo Fabi was the first to take to the track on Friday and had set a fast time in dry conditions.

Then the rain came and no one was able to beat his time. Toleman's first pole position! However, after crashing out on Saturday, Fabi started Sunday's race from the front row in the spare car. The clutch promptly failed and the Italian dropped back to eighth place. It was precisely this component that ultimately led to his retirement on lap 29.

Grand Finale

The quiet town of Hockenheim in Baden-Württemberg will once again be transformed into a mecca for German motor racing fans this weekend. Traditionally, the DTM season finale takes place here in October.

This year, too, the two final races promise to keep spectators on the edge of their seats right up to the very end. A driver can still score a maximum of 56 points from the races and qualifying sessions this weekend. In theory, based on the current standings, these 56 points could help six drivers from five different manufacturers win the title.

At the top of the championship is the current leader, Thomas Preining, in the formidable Manthey Porsche. With 197 points, he is in the best position heading into the grand finale.

Mercedes driver Maro Engel follows with 174 points. He has already secured victory this year in the legendary 24-hour race at the Nürburgring.

Just one point behind him is Marco Wittmann, a true DTM professional. In his 'Green Machine', he could clinch his third DTM championship title this weekend.

The fourth in the running is Mercedes driver Lucas Auer. However, trailing by 45 points, he will need a lot to go his way if he wants to be in contention at the top once again.

Matteo Cairoli (Ferrari) and Nicki Thiim (Aston Martin) are two further potential title contenders. However, trailing Preining by 47 and 50 points respectively, it will be difficult for either of them to make the leap to the top of the standings.

wOne thing is certain: at Hockenheim, the title will ultimately be decided in the final metres!
